

Press ReleaseFire in porcelain former storage and mechanical workshop of Latexx Partners, Malaysia

Vienna, Austria / Kamunting, Malaysia, 24 November 2016 – In the evening of 23 November 2016 (local time), a fire broke out in the Malaysian production site of examination and protective gloves (Latexx Partners). For safety reasons the operation of several adjacent production sites was stopped and the sites were evacuated. The fire was extinguished within a few hours and nobody was hurt.

The fire damage affects the main storage for formers used for the glove production and the mechanical workshop, which are located next to one of the seven production buildings on the factory premises. At present, experts are investigating the cause of the fire as well as the amount of property damage. An insurance exists for the property damage and the costs of the business interruption.

All production lines at the site, with the exception of one production area that is located right next to the source of fire, have restarted operation and supplies are continued.
